

For the Love of Reading

Many people love to read. They read to learn new things. They read because they love stories. People go to the library to get new books. They also go to bookstores. They walk around. They look at the covers of books. They prejudge whether they will like the book based on the cover. They predict what it will be about. They preview the books by reading a few pages. They may also preview it by looking at the pictures. Then, they choose a book. People find it fun to pick out a new book.
